Give to a local child in need with Tony's Metro Magic 2019

Our 10th annual toy drive, Tony's Metro Magic, has kicked off for the 2019 holiday season! Here's how you can bring cheer to local kids this year.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan@metro.us

We are so grateful for our loyal readers, and the kindness they've shown over the years by participating in our annual holiday toy drive, Tony's Metro Magic. We hope to keep the holiday cheer going strong this year, as we mark the toy drive's 10th anniversary.

Our late Editor-in-Chief Tony Metcalf oversaw the project for more than four years before his passing in 2013. Since then, Metro has continued the tradition of Tony's Metro Magic as a way to bring joy to underprivileged kids in our community.

This year's toy drive runs through mid-December to allow time for items to be distributed before the holidays. Metro has created a wish list that readers can access by going to metro.us/magic. Gifts range from $3.99 and up. Diapers, coats, bedding and other essential items are also available for purchase.

This year, items will be directly delivered to the local charities we've partnered with in our Metro cities (New York, Boston and Philadelphia). For those donating in New York, items will go to the Institute for the Development of African-American Youth (IDAAY).

If you wish to donate, you may visit our website, choose items and pay online using Target's secure payment system. Your gifts, along with your name attached, will be automatically delivered to the charities' collection locations.

"The magic and the joy that toy donations bring to our families in need here at Heading Home during such a critical time of year is indescribable," said Martha Buckley, Director of Development for Heading Home. "Each year we support over 700 children in our shelter programs and the ability to provide each of them with the dignity of special, new holiday gifts is a reminder to them and their families that there is a community of people around them who see them and who care. The lasting impact of your generosity extends far beyond the holiday season and brings so much joy to local families in need. Heading Home sincerely thanks all of you for the many years of support each holiday season!"

Metro thanks readers in advance for remembering children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have presents to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference in a child's holiday season.

To donate in Philly visit tgt.gifts/metro-philly-2019. Please note that the deadline to donate to the Philly charity is Dec. 6.

Former New York Mayor Bloomberg enters 2020 Democratic presidential race

Bloomberg will likely offer moderate policies.

Billionaire businessman Michael Bloomberg, the former mayor of New York City, jumped into the U.S. presidential race on Sunday, adding another moderate voice to a crowded field of Democratic contenders seeking to face Republican President Donald Trump in the November 2020 election.

The move represents an about-face for Bloomberg, 77, who had said in March that he would not make a run for the White House.

"I'm running for president to defeat Donald Trump and rebuild America. We cannot afford four more years of President Trump's reckless and unethical actions," Bloomberg, who founded prominent media company Bloomberg LP and serves as its chief executive, said in a statement on his campaign website.

Ranked by Forbes as the eighth-richest American with an estimated worth of $53.4 billion, Bloomberg will have the advantage of being able to self-finance his campaign and pour millions of dollars into advertising and hiring staff.

Bloomberg's candidacy presents a late challenge to the pack of Democratic contenders near the top in opinion polls - fellow centrists Joe Biden, the former U.S. vice president, and Pete Buttigieg, the mayor of South Bend, Indiana, and prominent liberal U.S. Senators Elizabeth Warren and Bernie Sanders.

Bloomberg has been critical of anti-Wall Street crusader Warren and her plan to tax the super wealthy to pay for programs ranging from universal healthcare to free college tuition. He will compete with Biden and Buttigieg to become the moderate alternative to the liberal agendas of Warren and Sanders.

He has won allies in the party with his advocacy and philanthropy on climate change and in fighting gun violence, pouring millions into groups pushing for more restrictive gun laws. Bloomberg served as mayor of New York, the largest U.S. city, from 2002 to 2013.

Bloomberg had filed paperwork on Thursday with the U.S. Federal Election Commission to run for president. He already had filed paperwork to be eligible for the Democratic primary in Alabama and four other states with early deadlines for ballot qualification.

He announced earlier in November a $100 million online ad campaign targeting Trump in four battleground states. The advertising blitz drew criticism from some rival Democratic candidates.

$100M

Bloomberg announced earlier in November a $100 million online ad campaign targeting Trump in four battleground states. The advertising blitz drew criticism from some rival Democratic candidates.

"I don't have that money ... but I have actually gotten things done in the gridlock of Washington," U.S. Senator Amy Klobuchar said on ABC's "This Week" program on Sunday.

Bloomberg will face significant disadvantages because of his late start, which means he will be playing catch-up with rivals who have been putting together campaign staffs for months ahead of the state-by-state battle for the Democratic nomination.

To counter that, he plans to pursue the unorthodox strategy of skipping the four states with early nominating contests in February, beginning on Feb. 3 in Iowa, and focus primarily on the states that hold primaries and caucuses starting on so-called Super Tuesday on March 3.

No winning presidential contender has ever pursued a similar strategy.

Bloomberg already has come under fire from liberal critics who say he would be the wrong choice for a Democratic Party turning against corporate money in politics and dedicated to ending income inequality in America. REUTERS

The Magic Gardens crew assesses the repairs of the Isaiah Zagar mosaic mural at Painted Bride Arts Center on Vine Street on Nov. 21, 2019. EMILY SMITH

The Painted Bride strips bare

After controversy regarding the Old City art venue's sale and Isaiah Zagar's mosaic-mural, the Painted Bride begins the business of booking shows again.

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

Laurel Raczka takes a deep breath when you tell her you want to discuss all things Painted Bride. That's no surprise.

Ever since 2017, Raczka, the Painted Bride's longtime executive director, and her board, have been trying to sell the left-of-center performing arts venue, which has resided at 230 Vine Street since 1982, because its original model was no longer sustainable.

The new goal for the non-profit arts center that initially started in 1969 on South Street was to take its programming outside of Old City, to new venues and diverse communities throughout Philadelphia. To that end, Raczka and the board wanted to sell the property.

The sticking point, however, has always been a building-long mosaic — 14,213-square-feet — on the Bride's facade from famed Philly muralist Isaiah Zagar.

Now, in its third attempt to broker a sale for condominium construction at the site (this time, from Groom Investments), a decision from Philadelphia Orphans' Court Judge Matthew D. Carrafiello spelled out that the Bride can't sell its Old City property because of the building's "irreplaceable" Zagar mosaic — that is, unless a buyer takes the building with the mural's façade intact. Its potential destruction, in the opinion of Judge Carrafiello, would "all but ensure the destruction of what many individuals consider to be a true treasure."

"It has been a very frustrating process," said Raczka. "Our work is to support artists, not be realtor. This is a distraction from doing our work."

So now, along with appealing Carrafiello's decision, the Painted Bride is working with Zagar's Magic Gardens staff, and assessing potential damage to the mosaic so that the Bride brain-trust can get back to business — booking shows again at its Vine Street home starting on Dec. 6, while curating additional shows at venues in West Philly and Germantown starting that same weekend.

"I'm not aware of any decision exactly like this one," said Zagar's attorney Jim Moss of the victory and the possible legal precedent. "The law in Pennsylvania requires approval from the Orphans Court for a sale like this to occur with a commercial buyer via a charity. The court turned down the proposed sale because it would result in the destruction of the art work which the court found to be of great value. The judge felt that this is how the public interest would best be served."

> "It has been a very frustrating process. Our work is to support artists, not be realtor. This is a distraction from doing our work."
> Laurel Raczka

"Obviously it's very exciting for us and think it was a historic ruling for the city," said Emily Smith, Executive Director of Philadelphia's Magic Gardens, currently on location at the Bride doing mural assessment. "We are thrilled to take care of it and can guarantee it will live on for many, many more years. I think in 20 or 30 years so many people will be talking about what a landmark building it is and what it meant that it was saved."

A series of shows are upcoming, primarily looking to the African-American experience, divided between the Bride's Old City location (starting with Dec. 6's "Dreams and Delusions" multimedia exhibition) to that same weekend's first off-site shows such as trumpeter-composer Hannibal Lokumbe's "First Breath, Last Sigh," Dec. 7 at S 38th Street's Philadelphia Episcopal Cathedral.

Senior Democrat says next step underway in Trump impeachment probe

Democratic U.S. lawmakers have begun the next step in the impeachment inquiry into President Donald Trump - writing a report on their findings - but still could take more testimony and hold additional hearings, the chairman of the House of Representatives Intelligence Committee said on Sunday.

Representative Adam Schiff, whose committee is leading the inquiry that threatens Trump's presidency, said the panel has started work on the report after two weeks of public hearings with testimony from current and former U.S. officials. The panel has held five public hearings and has no more scheduled.

The report is an important step toward a possible vote in the Democratic-led House on articles of impeachment - formal charges - against the Republican president. If those are approved, the Senate, controlled by Republicans, would then hold a trial on whether to convict Trump and remove him from office. Republicans have shown little inclination toward removing Trump, who is seeking re-election in 2020.

The inquiry centers on a July 25 phone call in which Trump asked Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky to investigate political rival Joe Biden and his son Hunter Biden as well as a discredited conspiracy theory promoted by Trump that Ukraine, not Russia, interfered in the 2016 U.S. presidential election. Hunter Biden had worked for Burisma, a Ukrainian energy company.

"We don't foreclose the possibility of more depositions, more hearings. We are in the process of getting more documents all the time. So that investigative work is being done," Schiff said on CNN's "State of the Union."

"What we're not prepared to do is wait months and months while the administration plays a game of 'rope a dope' in an effort to try to stall. We're not willing to go down that road," Schiff said.

Democrats have accused Trump of abusing his power by pressuring a vulnerable U.S. ally to interfere in an American election by digging up dirt on his domestic political opponents. Biden is a leading contender for the Democratic nomination to face Trump in the November 2020 election.

With the first party nominating contests set for February, "there's an urgency to make sure the election and the ballot box have integrity," Democratic Representative Eric Swalwell, an Intelligence Committee member, told the "Fox News Sunday" program.

Trump's administration has refused to provide documents requested by House Democrats and blocked witnesses from testifying, including Secretary of State Mike Pompeo, former national security adviser John Bolton and acting White House Chief of Staff Mick Mulvaney. The president's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, also has refused to cooperate.

Bolton and other officials have sought court rulings on whether they should comply with a congressional subpoena or honor the Trump administration's order not to testify, a process that could take months.

Trump has said he did nothing wrong. and dismisses the inquiry as politically motivated. Many Republicans in Congress have rallied to his defense and assailed the Democrats leading the inquiry claiming there were "no impeachable offenses."

Pope urges abolition of nuclear weapons at Japan's ground zeros

Pope Francis visited sites in Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Pope Francis arrives to conduct a Holy Mass at Nagasaki Baseball Stadium in Nagasaki, Japan on November 24, 2019. REUTERS

Pope Francis brought his campaign to abolish nuclear weapons to the only two cities ever hit by atomic bombs on Sunday, calling their possession indefensibly perverse and immoral and their use a crime against mankind and nature.

Francis visited the ground zeros of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, both seared in the world's collective consciousness after the bombs dropped there by the United States three days apart in August 1945 in an effort to end World War II.

"Here, in an incandescent burst of lightning and fire, so many men and women, so many dreams and hopes, disappeared, leaving behind only shadows and silence," Francis said at Hiroshima's Peace Memorial after standing in silent prayer and listening to a harrowing account by a survivor.

Yoshiko Kajimoto, who was 14 at the time, recalled "people walking side by side like ghosts, people whose whole body was so burnt that I could not tell the difference between men and women, their hair standing on end, their faces swollen to double size, their lips hanging loose, with both hands held out with burnt skin hanging from them."

"No one in this world can imagine such a scene of hell," she said.

More than 100,000 people died instantly in the twin attacks and about 400,000 others died in subsequent months, years and decades of radiation sickness or illnesses.

"With deep conviction I wish once more to declare that the use of atomic energy for purposes of war is today, more than ever, a crime not only against the dignity of human beings but against any possible future for our common home," the pope said in Hiroshima. "The use of atomic energy for purposes of war is immoral, so too the possession of nuclear weapons is immoral, as I already said two years ago." REUTERS

Carson Kressley talks new holiday competition series, "Wrap Battle."

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

There are a lot of things that are inevitable when it comes to the holidays: festive music, bright lights, plenty of cookies and a lot of gift wrapping. Some people aren't exactly fans of gift wrapping, but others really go all out for the holiday tradition and on Freeform's new competition series, "Wrap Battle," audiences will get to see some stellar showcases of the latter. But the new show is also meant to inspire those who maybe aren't too keen on gift wrapping to come up with their own personal touch, which is also what judge Carson Kressley loves the most about it. Being a jack of all trades with all things design, it makes sense for Kressley to be on the panel and he truly fits the bill when it comes to loving everything about the holidays as well. Kressley sat down with Metro to chat about the show, his judging style and what audiences can expect to be inspired from on "Wrap Battle."

to be a judge on "Wrap Battle?"
Oh gosh, well I love to work and it was a job so I was immediately on board, but most importantly I love anything that has to do with style and design. I think whether you're wrapping a gift or you're dressing a person for an event or you're creating a look for a runway, it's really all the same. It's about proportion, color, making it exciting and adding your own personal stamp to it. It was really in my wheelhouse, and I also happen to really love reality competition shows — but also I'm the person who puts their Christmas tree up the day after Halloween and I've always loved the holidays since I was a little kid. Just creating beautiful gift wrapping and decorating, I think it's just one of those things that I've always really enjoyed.

What does each episode of "Wrap Battle" consist of?
Well, we have the most amazing gift wrappers from all over the United States and they really are so talented. Some of them run businesses where all they do is professional gift wrapping and some are more of interior design or stylists, so it's a wide variety. Each episode there are two challenges and there really are a lot of opportunities for out-of-the-box and interesting gift wrapping techniques. They are wrapping the most outrageous things or sometimes they have to use unusual materials, so it's a little bit like "Project Runway" in the sense that they're not just making a dress but sometimes they are making it out of something really unique. It's always something interesting and intriguing and you'll think 'Wow, who would have thought of that?' It keeps the show quite fresh and fun. Some of the challenges are very big and over-the-top and will be very exciting, but some of the other ones will give people lots of ideas on how to create beautiful presentations themselves for the holidays, so that's a really fun part as well. I love that people can really watch and be inspired and learn stuff — I learned so much just from watching the show, and I loved it.

What were you looking for when you were judging and was it ever difficult to choose a winner?
It's always difficult because you get to fall in love with the contestants on the show, and I always want everybody to do really well. So that part is hard. But my job as a judge, whether that's being a judge on "Wrap Battle" or "RuPaul's Drag Race" or the Miss Universe pageant — whatever it is, our job as judges is to ask, 'Did you meet the criteria of the challenge and did you do the best job?' So in that way, it's not that difficult. I think what I always look for is someone who's executed all of the components of the challenge but did it in their own personal way so that it has their stamp on it and you know it's their work. That goes for any kind of artist. That's always the most successful endeavor, when you do a great job but it's also very personal and everyone knows that it's your work.

Can audiences expect any kind of twists or curveballs with "Wrap Battle?"
There's definitely a lot of different switch-ups and there are some team challenges — just some challenges that I think contestants really had no idea were coming their way. Sometimes even us at judges saw what was happening and went, 'Wow that's incredible.' There is always a twist in every episode that keeps our contestants on their toes.

How was it working with the other judges and host on "Wrap Battle?"
Sheryl Underwood is the host and one of our judges and then Wanda Wen has this wonderful and amazing gift wrapping business here in LA, and she is kind of the gift wrapper to the stars. Sheryl is so funny and getting to do a show with her was wonderful because we were all just so entertained on set every day, and Wanda just has so much knowledge in the art of Japanese gift wrapping, gift wrapping in Europe and different presentations, so she was so inspirational. We also have incredible guest judges that come through as well.

What do you love the most about "Wrap Battle?"
I think ultimately it's a holiday show, and since I love the holidays, that adds a little extra glitter and sparkle for me. But I think I love this type of show because I love the creativity. Using materials, and packaging and just the things you would never expect — I love to see how people create, I appreciate that kind of artistry. I don't think a lot of shows on TV focus on creativity in this way and that's what I found so entertaining and inspiring about "Wrap Battle."

"Wrap Battle" premieres Nov. 25 on Freeform.

We're on fire with our NFL primetime picks lately, as we've hit on five straight against the spread in this space (Colts +3.5 vs. Texans on TNF, Chiefs -5.5 over Chargers on MNF, Browns -2.5 over Steelers on TNF, Seahawks +6 over 49ers on MNF and Raiders +1 over Chargers on TNF).

We'll look to stay hot tonight on MNF with the Rams hosting the Ravens.

The Ravens are steamrolling the competition right now as they've ripped off six straight wins, including victories over the Seahawks (30-16), Patriots (37-20) and Texans (41-7). The blasting of the Texans eight days ago was particularly impressive as the Baltimore defense looked elite. The narrative surrounding the Ravens earlier in the year was that if you could simply contain Lamar Jackson, you would be well on your way to victory. Jackson has continued his ridiculous level of play (four TD passes and 79 yards rushing against Houston last week), but now the Ravens defense is getting in on the fun as well.

ALL GETTY IMAGES

Baltimore has allowed an average of just 16 points per game since the start of October.

On the flip side, the Rams have been one of the more disappointing teams in the league since their Super Bowl run a year ago. Their offense has been in a huge funk, as they are averaging just 17.6 points per game in their past three games. Jared Goff has regressed to Trubisky-esque levels as Sean McVay only trusted his QB to throw the ball 18 times last week against the Bears.

The only way the Rams will be able to hang in this one is if Todd Gurley has another vintage outing. McVay let the old Cadillac out of the garage last week in the 17-7 win over Chicago, as Gurley ran the ball a season-high 25 times for 97 yards.

LA cannot afford to lose many more games the rest of the way if they hope to return to the postseason, so expect McVay to pound the ball with Gurley again.

The Rams are actually tied for first for the best record in the NFL against the spread this season at 7-3-0, while Baltimore is 5-5-0. At some point, too, the red-hot Ravens will come back to Earth - but the Rams just aren't the team to derail this train.

The play: Ravens -3.5 (-107)

College FB betting: Cincinnati at Memphis

Cincinnati (10-1) is likely to come up short on firepower when they face the dynamic offense of the Memphis Tigers (10-1) at the Liberty Bowl on Friday afternoon.

The Tigers are eighth in points per game and sixth in yards per play thanks mainly to junior quarterback Brady White, who's completed over 67 percent of his passes for an astonishing 10.1 yards per attempt with a 30-7 TD-INT ratio. However, he's had the benefit of a workhorse running back behind him in freshman Kenneth Gainwell, who's rushed for 6.8 yards a carry on 168 attempts with 12 TDs. This duo has helped earn Memphis 47.4 points per game in their last five contests. The Tigers carry a robust 7-3-1 spread record in 2019.

By contrast, the Bearcats are 1-4 against the spread in their last five tilts, scoring 24 or fewer points three times. They're also 3-9 against the spread when facing teams with winning records, and have dropped seven of their last nine contests spread-wise on the road. Cincinnati will need a lot more from QB Desmond Ridder, who's just 18-for-43 with 140 yards over his last two games, if they want to hang in this one.

The play: Memphis spread

Wentz, Eagles struggle again in loss to 'Hawks

Turnovers plague Eagles in another unimpressive showing.

JOVAN ALFORD
letters@metro.us

Carson Wentz could do little against the Seahawks' defense on Sunday. GETTY IMAGES

The Eagles needed a superhuman performance from fourth-year quarterback Carson Wentz without the services of Nelson Agholor, Jordan Howard, Alshon Jeffery and Lane Johnson.

That did not happen.

The Eagles' offense struggled against a Seattle Seahawks defense that was missing superstar defensive end Jadeveon Clowney.

The Seahawks (9-2) defeated the Eagles (5-6), 17-9 at Lincoln Financial Field on Sunday as Philadelphia's playoff hopes took a huge hit as they continue to chase the Dallas Cowboys for the NFC East top spot.

Looking at the battle of the quarterbacks, neither Wentz nor Russell Wilson played particularly well under center, thanks to both teams' defenses.

Wilson — an MVP candidate — completed 52 percent of his passes for 200 yards, a touchdown and an interception. He was also sacked six times.

Wentz completed 73.3 percent of his passes for 256 yards and a touchdown but threw two interceptions.

Just like Wilson, the Eagles' fourth-year signal-caller did not have any time under center as he was sacked three times. Wentz also fumbled three times and lost two of them behind a struggling offensive line.

Rookie offensive tackle Andre Dillard was benched in the second half and replaced by Halapoulivaati Vaitai while Philadelphia lost All-Pro right guard Brandon Brooks to an illness. He was replaced by Matt Pryor, who was drafted in the sixth round of the 2018 NFL Draft.

Despite the offensive struggles, the Eagles managed to strike first on Sunday.

After a short punt from Seahawks punter Michael Dickson, Philadelphia put together a nine-play, 33-yard scoring drive.

A drive that included Jay Ajayi's first rush of the season and Greg Ward's first NFL reception saw the Eagles get down to the 11-yard line, but Wentz overthrew running back Miles Sanders on third-and-goal, leading to a Jake Elliott 28-yard field goal.

The Seahawks responded when Wilson found Malik Turner for a 33-yard touchdown reception on a flea-flicker, putting Seattle up 7-3. It was the second-straight week that the Eagles' defense had been burned by a trick play.

It prompted the start of Wentz's turnover issues, which began with a strip-sack by Rasheem Green. It was Wentz's fourth fumble since Week 7.

In the second quarter, Wentz was intercepted by veteran Bradley McDougald, which led to the Seahawks putting together an 11-play, 77-yard drive that was capped off by a Jason Myers 24-yard field goal.

The Seahawks went into halftime up 10-3, thanks to the ineptitude of the Eagles' offense.

On their first offensive possession of the third quarter, another promising Eagles drive was stopped short when Wentz fumbled the ball again, which was recovered by Seahawks defensive lineman Quinton Jefferson.

Just like the Eagles, the Seahawks had a prime opportunity to seize control of the game after the Wentz turnover.

With 4:53 left in the third quarter, Wilson was intercepted by safety Rodney McLeod, who was looking for wide receiver Doug Moore. Consequently, the Eagles could not capitalize on the Wilson turnover, who only had two interceptions coming into Sunday's game.

At the beginning of the fourth quarter, Seahawks running back Rashaad Penny tacked on a 58-yard rushing touchdown, increasing Seattle's lead to 17-3. The former first-round pick finished the game with 129 rushing yards on 14 carries.

As the final quarter progressed, Philadelphia turned the ball over a couple more times, ending any chances of a potential comeback.

The Eagles will begin December with a road game against the Miami Dolphins (2-9) next Sunday at Hard Rock Stadium (1 p.m. ET, FOX).

LEGAL NOTICES

Notice of an Intent to Remediate to a Statewide Health Standard

(Sections 302(e)(1)(i), 303(h)(1)(ii), 304(n)(1)(i), and 305(c)(1))

Pursuant to the Land Recycling and Environmental Remediation Standards Act, the act of May 19, 1995, P.L. 4, No. 1995-2., notice is hereby given that The Vertex Companies, Inc., on behalf of Extra Space Properties 51 LLC, has submitted to the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection a Notice of Intent to Remediate for the property located at 4433 Wayne Avenue, Philadelphia, Philadelphia County. This Notice of Intent to Remediate states that the site was a former instrument manufacturing facility. The site groundwater has been found to be contaminated with chlorinated volatile organic compounds at concentrations exceeding the Non-Residential and Residential Used Aquifer Groundwater MSCs but below the Non-Residential and Residential Non-Use Aquifer Groundwater MSCs. The source and extent of the contamination is known. Extra Space Properties 51 LLC has indicated that remediation measures have been developed and will consist of the injection of activated persulfate in an attempt to further reduce the concentrations of such contaminants. The current and proposed future use of the property will be commercial.
